Volume 23: AL Manakh Gulf Continued

Edited by AMO, Archis, Pink Tank, NAI

In a world buzzing with satellite aerials, news flashes and status updates, this second Al Manakh – a special issue of Volume Magazine – provides an essential and comprehensive guide to the Gulf region during turbulent times: the worldwide financial crisis. The credit crunch is a 'stress test' for the different development models in the region as nations prepare for a post-oil economy. This transition provides several challenges: economic re-profiling, food security, environmental exposure, multiculturalism and demographic growth.

Post-Ductility: Metals in Architecture and Engineering

Editor: Michael Bell and Craig Buckley

Metals—as surface, structure, or generators of space—play a role in nearly every strain of modernization in architecture. They define complete geographies of work, production, and political life. Non-architectural metals delivered in automobiles and hard goods in the United States and worldwide have been sourced as the engines of the sprawling late twentieth-century city. In Post-Ductility, an interdisciplinary group of architects, historians, theorists, and engineers collectively explore (and test) the past, present, and future possibilities of this quintessential building material. Post-Ductility is the third in the series Columbia Books on Materials and Architecture.
